5. Methodology: training activities

In order to attain the required level, all groups of students of all four languages are advised to study their language in a formal setting, as well as carrying out independent study, which is fundamental.

Regarding immersion abroad, the teachers responsible for courses at the receiving universities will establish the methodology to be used. When possible, students must enrol in courses on the following subjects:

- their immersion language
- their other language
- translation
- The remaining courses are electives however they must comply with the rules and regulations of the receiving university and be approved by the mobility advisor and coordinator of the School of Translation and Interpreting of the Universitat Pompeu Fabra.

Regarding the immersion in the four foreign languages carried out exceptionally as an alternative to the exchange agreement, the methodology will be established jointly by teachers and students within the framework of activities aimed at promoting autonomous learning.

6. Basic course bibliography

Regarding the immersion in a university abroad, the teachers in each receiving university will provide the bibliography for their courses.

Regarding the immersion in the four foreign languages carried out exceptionally as an alternative to the exchange agreement, the bibliography will be established jointly by teachers and students within the framework of activities aimed at promoting autonomous learning.
